About Hui Tama Nui (huitamanui@gmail.com)

Hui Tama Nui is the professional dance company of the newly formed non-profit organization, The Conservatory of Polynesian Performing Arts (COPPA) and has been performing since 1997. "Hui Tama Nui," meaning "The Next Generation" in the Tahitian language, expresses an appropriate name for the dance company led by a group of young directors, who have been mentored by legendary Tahitian instructors of French Polynesia. By creating and designing original production material, the dance company connects with the emotions and themes more personally. As a result, the dance company portrays a unique understanding of the culture's dance, music, language and expression as a dynamic performing art. Hui Tama Nui has won numerous awards including consecutive overall professional group awards from 2005 through 2008 at prestigious Tahitian dance competitions. Awarded categories include best music, best costume, best drumming as well as best traditional and contemporary Tahitian dance. Hui Tama Nui has also had the honor of being part of the 2010 cast of the San Francisco Ethnic Dance Festival where they performed Pepe Hau, the legend of the moth as messengers of the night, a performance that earned them two nominations for an Isadora Duncan Dance Award. Their next production will be at the 2011 San Francisco Ethnic Dance Festival, where they will be presenting, Rumia, a personal story inspired by the ancient legend of Ta'aroa, the Tahitian god of creation.
